A small dog, perhaps one of the splits family, committed suicide at the wharf at Green Cove Springs near water is returned. You pay only for the water is returned. You pay only for the water is returned. About 5 o'clock the spitz came at a fearful pace from St. John's avenue and ran out on the simil wharf, and, after looking longingly into the mys-tic depths, decided to return to the water's edge and take an even start with it. After plunging in he swam outward, then circled around for awhile, finally making for the outer end of the dock, where one of the hands of the steamer Manage lowered raised him to the dock.

But the dog had no idea of being foiled, but rushed across the dock and again into the water. Then he made no attempt to swim, but quietly lay on his side, with his nose under the water, where in a few ininutes his mundane troubles passed away forever. He died of a broken heart, perhaps, and not of undness, as some unsentimen-tal people suggested. He consumed about fifteen minutes in ending his life, and the net was witnessed by about fifty persons.
